Q: Using SOAP Requests I have a xmlns="" namespace in the SOAP Request. I have validated this namespace to be there but when I try to receive the input value using php_soap.dll/php_soapclient_php.dll, it gives the error Message: Invalid Namespace Code: 0x00000600 Filename: "xsd\Request\v1_2_0.xsd" Line Number: 25 String From Code : Name String From Filename : _ns_ String From Line Number: 35 A: When you have a namespace prefix in a WSDL file, it means that that element is inside a custom type. If you send that as a SOAP request, all "namespace-less" elements in that custom type will become namespace-less. They will be visible to the consumers that way, but they'll be optional (and you'll have to supply a default value for them). The effects of message context on comprehension of arguments in adolescents: a failure to replicate. In three experiments the effects of 1) varying the experimental manipulation and 2) modifying the message content on comprehension of arguments in college students was investigated. In Study 1, participants read three stories about a high school student in different contexts (feminist, pro-life, and control) for two purposes: to familiarize them with the stories and for comprehension testing. The results indicated that, in general, participants comprehended more text from the control story. In Study 2, to determine whether this was the result of the pro-life message interfering with comprehension, participants read three pro-choice or pro-life stories about the same topic with the same level of length (short, medium, and long). The results showed the same trend for an increasing comprehension of the pro-life stories, but this was not the case for the pro-choice stories. In Study 3, to determine whether the failure to observe this pattern was a result of the pro-life message interfering with comprehension, participants read three story conditions designed to produce a pro-life or a pro-choice response. The authors found similar comprehension for the pro-life and pro-choice conditions and, overall, significantly greater comprehension of the pro-life stories. In each of the three studies, comprehension of pro-life and pro-choice stories was strongly associated

Q: Can any one say that how it is selected from "parsed_args" (values) with Selenium and python in the Case an argument must be a value? While using An argument must be a value parameter I am getting the value of that parameter but I have no idea how it is selected from "parsed_args" (values) in the Case an argument must be a value. I am using python3.7 and selenium3.14. For your reference, i am using this line for printing the value of a parameter: ArgNames.append(parsed_args[0]) print(parsed_args[0]) And getting this result on console: I will be very thankful to you for your help. Thank you A: As mentioned in the comment section, to test for argument types, you can use the following in Python: if arg_type is arg_type_map[arg_name]: pass This will also allow you to skip some of the awkward if statements you currently use, and instead use: if arg_name in arg_type_map: # Do something and if not (arg_name in arg_type_map): # Do something This will work if you only have one type of argument, and will allow you to assign different arguments to different values. If you have multiple types of arguments, e.g.: args = [{'a': 1}, {'b': 2}, {'c': 3}] you could modify your question to more clearly describe what you are trying to achieve. Note: If you are dealing with only python, the arg_type_map, arg_name and arg_type variables can be put in a single dict as it is an argument dict. Q: What is the difference between golang pointers of struct and slice? It seems both have the capacity and size options set to -1 and size(of 8). Is the only difference the range interface? A: The main difference is that a slice object is heap allocated while the pointers to slice elements are stack allocated (in practice, the pointers are simply typed as an interface{}
